

Terms and conditions

The attached image is released to you under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-NC-SA 4.0) license.

This license allows you to:

- BY (Attribution): copy, distribute, display and perform our copyrighted work – and derivative works based upon it – but only if you give us credit in the way we request: ©Trustees of the British Museum.
- NC (NonCommercial): copy, distribute, display, and perform our work – and derivative works based upon it – but for noncommercial purposes only.
- SA (ShareAlike): distribute derivative works only under a license identical to the license that governs our work.

Creative Commons defines commercial use as “reproducing a work in any manner that is primarily intended for or directed toward commercial advantage or monetary compensation”.

For the avoidance of doubt, the British Museum considers the following to be commercial activities (this list is not exhaustive):

- anything that is in itself charged for, including textbooks and academic books or journals;
- an individual’s website or blog that is used as a platform to promote or conduct commercial activities (for example, to sell products created by or services provided by such individual);
- a commercial organization’s website or blog, including trading arms of charities;
- freely distributed leaflets or merchandise that promote goods or services;
- corporate stationary or any business communications such as annual reviews;
- free-entry events, presentations or lectures promoting a product or a service;
- displays in public places offering or promoting a product or service, such as use in a shop, restaurant, hotel, public bar or property show room.

Creative Commons defines commercial use as “reproducing a work in any manner that is primarily intended for or directed toward commercial advantage or monetary compensation”.

The British Museum considers the following to be non-commercial activities (this list is not exhaustive):

- use in free-entry, educational lectures (or in activities promoting free-entry lectures);
- promotion of any non-commercial activity, such as a poster advertising a bursary;
- one-off classroom use;
- reproduction within a thesis document submitted by a student at an educational establishment (an electronic version of the thesis may be stored online by the educational establishment as long as it is made available at no cost of the end user);
- use in websites as long as they are informational, academic or research-oriented and not linked to any commercial activity;
- display within a free-entry public space (including museums and galleries), as long as the use is not promoting a product or a service.

In the event of any identified breach of our Standard terms of use we may take any appropriate action to constrain further use and/or seek financial recompense.

Read more about the British Museum and Creative Commons

Please note

The British Museum has made every effort to identify copyright holders of objects and to obtain permission to include images on the website. Any omissions are unintentional and we will endeavour to rectify these as soon as possible, once we are notified.

You are reminded that if a work of art, sculpture or work of artistic craftsmanship is still in the artist's copyright (where for example the artist is still alive or has died within the last 70 years) you will need to obtain the additional permission of the artist or his or her estate or successor in title in order to reproduce the work. We are not able to help you in tracing artists or their successors in title. Some may be registered with DACS (www.dacs.org.uk).