Journal for Learning and Teaching in Higher Education will focus on Higher Education teaching, learning, research and contemporary thought. The aims of the journal are to raise the profile of scholarship in educational practice, and to bring together learners and educators in an open, creative and collaborative publication.

The journal seeks to do this by publishing a range of contributions from those engaged in higher education. Through sharing good practice, and recognising achievements in learning and teaching, and the evaluation of innovative practice, the journal positions the University as a home for higher educational research and innovative teaching, bringing students into the heart of higher educational inquiry.

The journal accepts papers and other contributions from Higher Education staff, students and alumni. We promote equality and diversity by identifying and challenging barriers in deciding journal policy, recruitment and future direction. We welcome insights from funded and unfunded teaching development projects, as well as investigations into classroom practice, learning development, educational theory, student experience and related areas. Students and staff are equally welcome to submit work. Creative writing and reinterpretations of research and scholarly outputs are particularly welcome. Our peer reviewers will offer constructive feedback on all submissions in the spirit of building capacity for scholarship in higher education practice and theory.

Authors retain copyright and grant the journal right of first publication with the work simultaneously licensed under Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License that allows others to share the work with an acknowledgement of the work's authorship and initial publication in this journal. Authors are able to enter into separate, additional contractual arrangements for the non-exclusive distribution of the journal's published version of the work (e.g., post it to an institutional repository or publish it in a book), with an acknowledgement of its initial publication in this journal. Authors are permitted and encouraged to post their work online (e.g., in institutional repositories or on their website) prior to and during the submission process, as it can lead to productive exchanges, as well as earlier and greater citation of published work (See The Effect of Open Access).
